Congratulations are due to Martin Edwards of Kingston, Ontario who has observed at least one species of all of the world's 159 families of birds as defined by the American Museum of Natural History.

This remarkable feat is given recognition on page 32 of the 1989 edition of the "Guinness Book of Records."

In the "not your ordinary list" department - while watching Toronto Blue Jay baseball games, Hugh Currie noted a total of 47 species (Ed.Note: Was one of them a Blue Jay?) and points out that unless someone has more he'll be able to retire undefeated as the team moves next year to the Skydome.

Figures for various provinces will be published in our March issue. If you wish to update any numbers, please let us know by January 15th. Thanks.
